

Facts About the Horseshoe Bat Picture for Kids 438

The horseshoe bat is a small, insect-eating bat that is found in warm climates around the world. Horseshoe bats are named for the horseshoe-shaped noseleaf that they have on their face. This noseleaf helps them to focus their echolocation calls, which they use to navigate and find food in the dark.

Horseshoe bats are typically brown or gray in color, and they have a wingspan of about 12 inches. They are found in a variety of habitats, including forests, caves, and buildings. Horseshoe bats are social animals, and they often roost in colonies of up to 100 individuals.
