In the small town of Ashwood, nestled in the heart of the Appalachian Mountains, a young girl named Anya lived a life of quiet desperation. Her parents were farmers, and they worked long hours to make ends meet. Anya spent her days alone, wandering the woods and dreaming of a more exciting life.

One night, as Anya was walking home from the creek, she saw a strange man sitting on a rock. He was tall and handsome, with long black hair and piercing blue eyes. Anya was immediately drawn to him, and she couldn't take her eyes away.

"Hello," the man said. "My name is Vlad."

"Anya," she replied.

Vlad smiled. "It's a pleasure to meet you, Anya. I've been watching you for some time now. You're a very beautiful girl."

Anya blushed. "Thank you," she said.

Vlad stood up and took Anya's hand. "Come with me," he said. "I want to show you something."

Anya hesitated for a moment, but then she followed Vlad into the woods. They walked for hours, until they came to a clearing. In the center of the clearing was a large, old oak tree.

"This is where I live," Vlad said. "I've been living here for centuries."

Anya was amazed. "You're a vampire?" she asked.

Vlad nodded. "Yes," he said. "I am a vampire. And I want you to be my wife."

Anya was shocked. "But why me?" she asked.

"Because you're beautiful," Vlad said. "And because you're pure. I can see it in your eyes."

Anya didn't know what to say. She had never thought of herself as beautiful, and she certainly didn't think of herself as pure. But something about Vlad's words made her believe him.

"Okay," she said. "I'll marry you."

Vlad smiled. "Good," he said. "Now, let's go home."

Vlad and Anya lived together in the clearing for many years. They were happy, and they had two children. But one day, a group of vampire hunters came to the clearing. They were led by a man named Van Helsing, and they were determined to destroy Vlad.

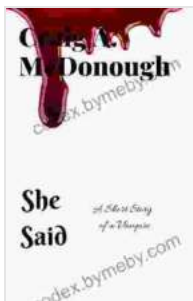

Vlad fought bravely, but he was outnumbered. He was killed by Van Helsing, and Anya and her children were taken away.

Anya never forgot Vlad. She told her children stories about him, and she taught them to be proud of their vampire heritage. And even though she lived a long and happy life, she always missed Vlad.

One day, Anya died. She was an old woman, and she had lived a full and happy life. But when she died, she went to the underworld. And there, she was reunited with Vlad.

They were together again, and they were happy. And they lived happily ever after.
