A Personal Account of Teaching During a Pandemic

The author, Amanda Ripley, is a former Time magazine reporter who turned to teaching in 2019. In Teacher Journal of the Plague Year, she chronicles her experiences teaching seventh grade English at a public school in New York City during the 2020-2021 school year. The book is a raw and honest account of the challenges and rewards of teaching during a pandemic.

Ripley writes about the challenges of teaching remotely, the difficulty of connecting with students who are struggling with their own personal challenges, and the toll that the pandemic is taking on teachers' mental health. But she also writes about the resilience of her students and the power of education to provide hope and opportunity in even the darkest of times.

A Must-Read for Teachers, Parents, and Students

Teacher Journal of the Plague Year is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the challenges and triumphs of teaching during the COVID-19 pandemic. It is a powerful and moving account that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.

Teachers will find solace and inspiration in Ripley's words. Parents will gain a greater understanding of the challenges that teachers are facing and the sacrifices that they are making. And students will be inspired by the stories of resilience and hope that Ripley shares.

Teacher Journal of the Plague Year is a book that will change the way you think about education. It is a must-read for anyone who cares about the future of our children.
