The Early Years

The Raiders were founded in 1960 as the Oakland Raiders. The team struggled in its early years, but in 1963, they hired Al Davis as their head coach. Davis was a former NFL player who had a reputation for being tough and demanding. He immediately began to instill a sense of discipline and toughness in the Raiders.

Under Davis's leadership, the Raiders began to improve. In 1967, they won the AFL championship. They repeated as champions in 1968, and in 1970, they won the first Super Bowl in franchise history.

The Super Bowl Years

The Raiders' success in the Super Bowl era was due in large part to their dominant defense. The "Silver and Black" defense was one of the most feared units in the NFL. They were led by a group of talented players, including Willie Brown, George Atkinson, and Ted Hendricks.

On offense, the Raiders were led by quarterback Ken Stabler. Stabler was a Pro Bowl quarterback who was known for his toughness and leadership. He was also known for his ability to make big plays when the game was on the line.

The Raiders won Super Bowls XI, XV, and XVIII. They also appeared in Super Bowl II, but they lost to the Green Bay Packers.

The Legacy of the 1970s Raiders

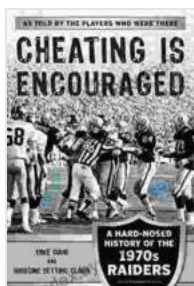

The 1970s Raiders are considered to be one of the greatest teams in NFL history. They were a dominant team that won three Super Bowls in a span of seven years. Their success was due to a combination of factors, including a tough defense, a talented offense, and a strong leadership team.

The Raiders' legacy continues to this day. They are one of the most popular teams in the NFL, and their fans are known for their passion and loyalty. The Raiders are also a symbol of the city of Oakland, and they have played a major role in the city's culture and history.
